Teenie:

I agree with your suggestion of referring to rule 1315F1(e):

"Successfully completing one or more college or university semester or quarter hours shall satisfy the continuing education hours for the year in which the course was completed". I complete 18 hours of coursework in the Fall of 2011.

That should apply. I hope the Board favorably agree with the request.
Meanwhile, I will proceed with the renewal and check off that I have met my continuing education requirements.

Let me know if I need to do anything else.

Thanks for your guidance and assistance.

Jay

jay, I sent to the board, and you may also want to review, but go our website www.lastbdarchs.com and hit on rules and look up rule 1315 F 1 (e)
-- not sure how that is handled, but we'll see .. if you feel you could claim CEH under that heading, you would be able to say you have your contin education for 2011 or we can wait to see what the board does -- our next regular board meeting is march 16.

Teenie:

I was going to do my 2012 renewal but it indicated that I must certify I had my continuing education fulfilled. I have asked for a waiver from the national office but I understand that it must begin with you. The attached will explain my position, that being when my practice slowed down I chose to take advantage and enrolled at tulane for a 2-year full time masters in historic preservation. Not cheap but I did so with a student loan.I just feel that over the next 2 years it will be the best continuing education available. i am willing to pay the renewal fee but posibly waive the CE for a two year period. i appreciate any help and assitance you can offer.

Thanks

Jay

I'M convinced and I certainly agree that only architectural courses should be acceptable. Architectural courses that are acceptable should be required to have some identifiable HSW content. It's good that we will discuss this at the March meeting.

Thanks Robert. I'll write Jay and tell him to go ahead and renew (he had read the rule in 1315 about college courses and said he thought it would apply) and I'll include this on agenda for 3/16 in case the board wants to clarify the rule … if that's acceptable.. (mar, please print)

All,

To clarify time for work on a masters would need to be for a post professional degree. As it stands Tulane, LSU, La Tech, and UL Lafayette all over the Master of Architecture as the first professional degree. Don't think the intent is to create a situation were completing graduate coursework for a first-professional degree could also be used for CE credit.

On another note it is good to read that work on a historic preservation degree could count for CEU credit. UL Lafayette is in the approval process for a graduate level certificate in Historic Preservation, which would be something that someone with a 5 year B.Arch professional degree may consider pursuing, if they can also get CEU credit that may be an additional incentive.

Board may want to consider only accepting ARCH courses for HSW CEU credit. Both Tulane's and the UL Lafayette historic preservation programs contain coursework in other departments such as history and archeology which are taught by faculty who are not architects and who are not familiar with the concept of HSW.

Ron/Paul/Dave -- Jay is enrolled for a 2 year masters in historic preservation. We have a rule that allows credit for successfully completing one or more college or university semester or quarter hours shall satisfy the CEH for the year in which the course was completed (1315 F 1 (e) . I'm assuming it has to be in a course considered HSW, yet it doesn't say. By his transcript, looks like he was enrolled fall 2011 (8/29-12/20). Have no idea if this can be considered satisfying 2011 CEH. If you feel he can use time in masters program, I assume he can count his spring course(s) as having satisfied CEH for 2012? I realize he said he isn't practicing and wouldn't need continuing ed nor have a need to renew right now, but he will need the contin ed when he decides to practice again... Let me know what you think? Another alternative would be to tell him to renew and mark "yes" to confirming he has continuing education and advising his request would be presented at 3/16 bd meeting. If denied, he would have so many months to make up but that's the problem, he says he can't since he is fulltime student. ☺ If possible, let me know something quickly so I can tell him what to do. Thanks
